CLEVER MR. BRIGGS

A MAN WHO PRIDED HIMSELF ON HIS TACT.

He Explains a Little Detail of Business to Mrs. Briggs in Connection With the Signing of a Check.

When Mr. Briggs came home one evening and found his wife with eyes suspiciously red he only kissed her as usual and made no remarks. Briggs was a man who prided himself on his taet. He studiously guided the conversation on commonplace subjects while they sat at supper. Mrs. Briggs answered in monosyllables of forced cheerfulness. "Now, my dear, what is the matter?" he suddenly asked when the meal was finished. "Oh, nothing," replied Mrs. Briggs.

Mrs. Briggs pouted, heritating be ween tears and a smile. At this opportune moment her husband arose, went around the table and put an arm about her shoulders. "Now, tell me all about it, little woman," he said. "You see, it does no good denying that something is troubling you. My powerfully analytic and introspectively deductive mind tells me otherwise." After a moment Mrs. Briggs spoke.

"I'll never give another cent to that hateful Fresh Air fund, never," she sald, and held a handkerchief to her

"What have they done to burt you?"

he ventured Mrs. Briggs arose, went to the side board and took out a paper. Pointing to a paragraph she bade her husband read. It was under the list of fresh air fund subscriptions and read as follows:

"One check was received signed 'A Friend 'This, of course, cannot be credited."

Briggs read the item and looked at his wife. "But-I don't see-does this make you feel bad?" he puzzled. "Why, certainly, stupid, I sent the had been reading about the poor walfs that live in those big tenements, on the East Side and have such pinched little lives, and lots of them die every summer. And they keep one of them $1.00 the sale of intoxicating liquors on in the country, where they can drink milk and pick flowers and romp on the green grass and get healthy for $5. So I decided I could spare $10, and sent it. Oh, I felt so good thinking that two little children were out

Briggs sparred for breath, When he could trust himself to speak he did so, guardedly,

"H'm - most extraordinary." mused judicially. "Very untactful on their part, to say the least. Still, it may happen that they use the full name system. It is, in fact, quite possible, I may say probable,

"The full name system?" asked Mrs. Briggs doubtfully.

"Yes," explained Briggs, "You see it is a check system in which the full name must be signed and-no pseudonym. I think, it is my opinion, you should have signed your full name and then requested in an accompanying letter that they should credit your subscription in the printed list to 'A Friend This system is almost universally used now." Mrs Briggs eyes were wide with wonder. "Dear me. I might have thought of that," she said. "Business is so complicated. I'll send another check." Briggs was a man who prided him

10-22-tf New York -- If Diogenes had been on earth wandering about Sheepshead bay the other night in search of an honest man his search would have ended successfully had the rays of his lantern rested on Stanley French. The latter, a resident of the village by the sea found $9.500 in a train which was traveling from the Belmont park track. Fifteen hours later he returned the money to its owner. Henry McDaniel, a trainer of race horses. "he horseman gave French a reward of $1,000. French was "broke." He had not won a bet for nearly two weeks-he is a betting commissioner at times for a Prooklyn politician-end the prospect of a hard winter was staring him in the face. He could have kept the money without fear of detection, too, for his wife was the only one who know he had found it. According to French's story, he went to Belmont park just one dollar 'strong," as he put it. After paying his fare from his home to the track and buying a program, there remained on his person only a few small coins. With the philosophy of his kind, he left the track without laying a bet; and boarded a car bound for home. The car had not traveled far when French had occasion to rub his leg, which had fallen asleep. Reaching down, the first thing that met his eye was a roll of bills. Picking up the roll and without counting the contents, he pouched it.

the wad. "What do you infend to do with it?"

Arriving home he showed his wife

she asked. "Return it." French replied. A canvays of his sporting cronies next morning easily yielded the information as to who had dropped the
